

homecoming

➡ "the greatest show on turf"

Southwest's homecoming week was truly "The Greatest Show on Turf." Students and faculty adorned the campus in circus props and attractions, and people were seen taking photos between classes. The introduction of a dunking booth got students riled up, and willing volunteers braced themselves as they dropped into the water.

There were many other activities for students during the week, such as the cookout, coronation ceremony, induction ceremony, and movie night. Everyone agreed that the food served at the cookout was some of the most delicious they had ever eaten; attendees had plates full of pulled pork sandwiches and sausage dogs that were fully dressed. The stunning homecoming court was honored during halftime at the coronation ceremony. Later, Kermit Davis, Jr. and Pat Brumfield were inducted into the Hall of Fame. Pleasant words and laughter emanated from the Student Union Auditorium as students gathered for a showing of The Greatest Showman. It was obvious that homecoming week was a huge success, and those who assembled for the fun were blessed with memories that would surely last.

by Madison VanNess and Eva-Marie Luter

left: Caleb Calhoun helps with the library Homecoming display; middle: Ali Smith and Alli Howell happily play a game of bean bag toss; far left: Layla Wilson laughs as her classmates attempt to dunk her in the dunking booth; above: Abbie Kaylee Brown, Anna Klaire Dorr, and Ariel Johnson perform their routine; top left: Zoe Miller and Kaitlyn McCarlie laugh while using the props.